CHARLES CARROLL: A CATHOLIC PATRIOT FOR AMERICAN LIBERTY

Each member of Congress ... in signing the Declaration of Independence... put in serious jeopardy all that they pledged to each other, their lives and their fortunes.

And among the list of patriot heroes, whose names are attached to that "immortal document," none was more distinguished than that celebrated Catholic, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who in signing the Declaration of Independence, did not hesitate to stake upon the issue, more property than all of the other signers put together. As he set his hand to the instrument, the whisper ran round the hall of Congress, "There goes some millions of property!" And there being many of the same name, when they heard it, said:

"Nobody will know what Carroll it is," as no one wrote more of his name, and one at his elbow remarked, addressing him: You'll get clear, there are several of that name, they will not know which to take." "Not so!" he replied; and instantly added (to his name) his residence, "of Carrollton". Charles Carroll lived to be the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.
